Gallery Project is an all volunteer organization. We have no paid employees. In January 2006, Gallery Project became a 501(c)(3) nonprofit organization. Gallery Project is financially supported by individual contributors and the sale of artwork. We are proud to have sold work in the past few years to individual and institutional collectors, including the University of Michigan Art Museum and the Ross School of Business at the University of Michigan.

Gallery Project collaborators, a fluid group of 8-12 working artists who represent a broad range of visual arts and geographic linkages, are selected on a yearly basis. They share in the management of the gallery and take responsibility for gallery support tasks such as website maintenance, design of electronic and printed cards, publicity, and documentation. We have made a special effort to recruit Detroit artists because of their unique perspectives on urban issues so crucial to the success of our region and state. Gallery assistants contribute their time and undertake special projects.

Information about the gallery, upcoming exhibits, and submissions can be found on our website. Interested persons can contact the gallery through the website or by phone.

(a gallery of ideas)

Gallery Project is a fine art collaborative whose mission is to provide a forum for contemporary art that is culturally aware, individualistic, courageous and thought provoking.
